A RESIDENT who works tirelessly on behalf of vulnerable homeless people has had her name planted in flowers in Clissold Park.

Fatima Roberts was nominated by her friend and colleague Emmy Minton in the Rooted in the Earth competition, which is part of the Create Art Award. A team of volunteers spent three days working with artist Joshua Sofaer to create the flowerbed.

Meanwhile CREATE09 has been blooming across the borough, with a huge range of arts, music and creative events for residents to enjoy. Hackney is taking the lead for the second year of the cultural festival for the five Olympic host boroughs. For more info, reviews, previews and competitions, see pg8&9 and pg17-20

PARK'S BIG BOOST

By Karyn Michael

THE biggest transformation of Clissold Park in more than a century is set to go ahead following the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and Big Lottery Fund's (BLF) announcement of a £4.46m grant.

The money will support the Council's £8.9m scheme to redevelop the much-loved landmark following extensive consultation with park users and residents on the new design and amenities.

Once completed the park will have a newly restored Mansion House with a new cafe and improved access for people with disabilities. There will be new function and meeting rooms for community use. The revamp will also see

“Clissold Park is a focal point for residents”

extensive maintenance of the New River and lakes, a renovated animal enclosure, and a new play and urban sports area, as well as other improvements to enhance the appearance of the park.

The Clissold Park User Group continue to be important stakeholders in the project and expressed their strong support for the current plans for the refurbishment of Clissold House and Park in a letter of support to the Council.

Cllr Nargis Khan, the Council's Cabinet

Member for Community Services, said: “Clissold Park is a focal point for residents in Stoke Newington and the rest of our borough. We are delighted to have secured this funding which will help us realise our vision for the first major redevelopment of Clissold Park and House in over 100 years.”

Message from the Mayor

Good news in green spaces

I WAS pleased recently to welcome to Hackney the new Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, John Denham, in his first official visit in his new ministerial role. The Minister had chosen Hackney as the place to announce the publication of the national public opinion survey of local services. In keeping with the theme of his announcement, we took the opportunity to take him to London Fields where he could meet front-line staff – including some of our apprentices – from parks, leisure, libraries and officers from the local Safer Neighbourhoods Team, as well as chatting to passing local residents and swimmers at the Lido.

The event took place on a beautifully sunny day and was an opportunity to show off London Fields, one of the seven parks in the borough to have been nationally recognised with a Green Flag award, which – as we've come to expect over the summer – was filled with people enjoying themselves: parents with toddlers in the paddling pool, people playing tennis and running, or just enjoying the sun.

This month there was good news for one of our other award-winning parks, with the news that Hackney's bid to the Heritage Lottery Fund has successfully reached its final stage, which will contribute around half of the £9m cost of returning the Grade II listed Clissold House and grounds to its former 18th-century glory and introduce 21st-century facilities to meet the needs of modern-day visitors. This is a jointly funded project between the Council and the Heritage Lottery Fund which will further improve one of Hackney's much-loved green spaces.

£4.6m boost for Clissold Park

Clissold Park and House are set for their biggest transformation in 100 years

“We’ve worked closely with park users and residents, and will continue to work with them, to make sure the improvements are what local people want so we can all continue to enjoy the park for years to come.”

Work is due to start in January 2010, and should be completed by summer 2011.

In addition to funding conservation and repair work, the HLF/BLF grant will fund a programme of activities and volunteering opportunities for local people.

Sue Bowers, Head of Heritage Lottery Fund London, said: “This is a well-used local park that will in future be able to offer not only more attractions to visitors but also encourage far more people to volunteer to help in a wide range of capacities.”

Information sessions for residents about the restoration will be held in August. Further details will be displayed on Clissold

Park notice boards, and on the project website.

Work on the media centres getting under way in Hackney Wick

Go-ahead for media centre designs

IMPROVED designs for the 2012 media centres in Hackney Wick have been given planning permission. The original plans were criticised by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, who told the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) they did not “meet the needs of the high-quality employers who have expressed an interest in using the centres after the Games”. They were also described as

“extremely weak” by the Government’s architecture advisor, the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE). The ODA reworked the plans for the International Broadcast Centre (IBC) and Main Press Centre (MPC), and made important changes including providing detail on how the IBC can be split into smaller units for use in legacy, removing overhanging ducts from the ground floor ceiling to make way for studio space, and new cladding designs for both the IBC and MPC. During the Games, 20,000 journalists will report the Games to a global audience of four billion from the media centres. Leading digital, media and creative industry organisations are interested in moving to the centres after the Games, which will provide 900,000 sq ft of employment space in Hackney Wick.

Giving young people a great option for Saturday nights

Kick out crime

HAGGERSTON School was the setting as Hackney young people learnt about the dangers of gangs and gun and knife crime from the Metropolitan Police's CO19 Specialist Firearm Command.

The group, aged between 10 and 16, regularly attend the Leyton Orient Community Sports Programme (LOCSP) Kickz football sessions at the school.

They took a break from sport to participate in discussion aimed at increasing their knowledge about gun and knife crime, while diverting them and their friends away from getting involved.

Sergeant Paul Young from CO19 showed footage from a recent TV documentary about the unit and the various scenarios it faces, before leading the discussion.

He said: "We feel it is important to be pro-active and engage with our community and teach youngsters about the consequences of gun and knife crime and gang affiliation so we can divert them from it."

LOCSP Kickz is the result of a partnership between the Premier League, Football Foundation and the Metropolitan Police. It runs at Mabley Green, E9 on Tuesdays and Thursdays; Gascoyne Estate Hardcourt, E9, on Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays; and Haggerston School, E2, on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. The spotlight has been created as part of the Council's extended weekend provision for young people

By
Nick Rutherford

A HACKNEY project is leading a drive by the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF) to ensure young people have access to things to do on Friday and Saturday nights.

Launched in March, The Spotlight at Ocean in Mare Street is a monthly live show that brings young people aged 16 to 25 together for an evening of live chat with music, live performances and discussion. The next event is on 11 July, coinciding with the DCSF Open Weekend encouraging Councils and their partners to focus on the provision of positive activities at times when young people and communities say they need them most.

“The Spotlight is fun to watch and a good night out in Hackney”

Hackney-based music training and creative industries development charity Rising Tide was commissioned by the Council's youth service to create the event as part of its extended weekend provision.

A local teenager takes the lead in planning and organising The Spotlight, with help from a team of 12 young people, plus Council staff and youth workers.

With the exception of an invited celebrity artist at each event, all the performers and participants either live or work in Hackney. This time teenagers will be able to meet performers including J2K and Shystie.

Regular attendee Kelly-Louise Edwards said: "The Spotlight is entertaining, good fun to watch and a good night out in Hackney. The 60 Second Spot for performers gives Hackney's rising stars a chance to shine."

In response to demand, more youth clubs in Hackney are now opening on Fridays and Saturdays. Additionally the new Lordship South Youth Club, N16 – offering Thursday and Sunday evening activities – opened its doors on 2 July.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Henry is world's oldest man

FIRST World War veteran, Clapton-born Henry Allingham, 113, has become the world's oldest man. The oldest surviving member of the British Armed Forces entered the record books after 113-year-old Tomoji Tanabe from Japan, passed away in his sleep last month.

Although now living in Sussex in a centre for ex-servicemen, Henry, who became a 'teenager' for the second time on 6 June, returned to the borough in February, visiting Northwold Primary School in Upper Clapton. He spoke to Hackney Today about his fond memories of growing up near River Lea, Springfield Park and Clapton Pond.

Noisy restaurant loses licence

A RESTAURANT owner has lost his premises licence after repeatedly playing loud music that brought complaints from his neighbours.

Mike Bannerman-Hull, licensee of the Gye Nyame Restaurant in Morning Lane, E9, lost his appeal against the Council's decision to revoke the licence. At a hearing at Thames Magistrates Court on 9 and 11 June, the Court upheld the Council's decision and awarded costs to the authority of £2,334.50.

The Council's Noise Pollution team visited the premises on a number of occasions following complaints from residents. When the Noise Pollution team visited, the music was so loud that they could not hear each other above the noise. They had to leave the room in order to discuss the case. Cllr Alan Laing, the Council's Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Cases like this show that licensees won't get away with selfish, anti-social behaviour."

Which park's most picturesque?

IS London Fields your favourite green space? Or perhaps Springfield Park? Why not take some photos and enter the Postcards from the Park competition?

It is the second year of the competition, organised by the Heritage Lottery Fund, and Big Lottery Fund, in partnership with charity GreenSpace. The aim is to encourage people to enjoy their parks, while capturing images of what they most love about them. This year special categories include people at play, wildlife and heritage. All winners will have their photos exhibited at a London gallery, and photos will also be made into postcards and distributed at Lottery-funded venues. The closing date for entries is 3 August. Building inspiration

Haggerston School (above), Anne Tayler (top) and Thomas Fairchild (bottom) children's centres were all praised at the British Council for School Environments awards

By

Marcel Reinard

THREE Hackney buildings have received commendations at this year's British Council for School Environments (BCSE) awards.

The Superstudio at Haggerston School, E2, Thomas Fairchild Centre, N1, and Ann Tayler

Children's Centre, E8, competed against 169 entries in the best healthy learning environment category and best extension, refurbishment or remodel of a school category, respectively.

Thomas Fairchild and Ann Tayler are part of a network of 22 children's centres, run by The Learning Trust, that offer a range of services under one roof for children and families.

The Superstudio was developed in partnership with the Shoreditch Trust, and is part of a programme to help pupils become independent learners.

The buildings were praised by the BCSE "for investing time and energy in a project that ensures pupils and teachers have an inspirational centre to learn, play and teach in".

Local architects Cazenove, created the Ann Tayler extension, and Shoreditch's SCABAL, were behind The Superstudio.

The BCSE is a charity and membership organisation of schools, councils, construction companies, architects, and all those involved in designing learning environments.

Three named for Palace honours

THREE Hackney people have been recognised in the Queen's Birthday Honours. Retired superintendent Alun Goode (left) is to be decorated with the Queen's Police Medal.

He said: "I have many fond memories of my 31 years spent as a police officer, but the last three years in Hackney – where crime has been reduced by nearly 40 per cent in five years – have been particularly special."

Alun has worked in a variety of roles as both a uniformed officer and a member of CID. He has worked across London, joining Hackney Police in 2006 as detective superintendent, and was latterly acting borough commander.

“The last three years in Hackney have been particularly special”

Joining Alun at the Palace will be outreach worker David Segelman and editor of BBC Radio Science Deborah Cohen. Both will receive an MBE – David for services to Jewish people in north London; and Deborah for services to broadcast and science.

Although David's honour will be for his contribution to the Jewish community, his work includes his long-standing role as a volunteer for Drugsline as well as working in mental health across London and parts of Essex. David said: "I'm excited – it's recognition of my work in mental health, which I feel strongly about."

The honours lists recognise merit, courage and service and are published twice a year at New Year and for the Queen's official birthday in June.

Parading the past

Children marched with puppets they made of their heroes – including Nelson Mandela (above) – from the 40 years Parkwood Primary and Nursery School has been open

Story & pictures by
Marcel Reinard

THERE was dancing in the streets in celebration of Parkwood Primary and Nursery School's 40th anniversary last month.

The N4 pupils, aged between three and 11, led a parade through streets surrounding the school, full of rambunctious pride for the school and the hard work put into making the pageant.

Four decades were marked with eight puppets charting famous eras, events or people. A 1970s punk; Nelson Mandela's release from prison; Barack Obama's election; and the Olympic torch were all referenced.

Local artist Jo Beldham helped with the children's bamboo frame and papier

“It was a great joined-up effort between the pupils, staff, teachers and everyone helping out” mache creations, produced in just one week.

The parade marched through the streets in true carnival style, much to the surprise and admiration of onlookers. The school also celebrated with a concert and birthday cakes for each of the eight classes.

Parkwood headteacher, Patricia Cardis, said: “It was a great joined-up effort between the pupils, staff, teachers and everyone else helping out. Parkwood has always been a lovely place and I've never wanted to move on.”

NEWS IN BRIEF

(L-R) Mayor Pipe, Tim Shields and John Denham with parks staff at London Fields Lido

Survey says 'Yes' to Hackney

A NEW Government Minister made Hackney his first official visit to launch the results of a national survey on what residents think of where they live.

John Denham MP, Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, paid a visit to London Fields Lido on 23 June, meeting Council staff working in parks, libraries, street cleaning and recycling, as well as Chief Executive, Tim Shields, and Mayor Jules Pipe.

The Minister was there to launch the national Place Survey results, which in Hackney was based on nearly 1,500 questionnaires filled in and returned to independent polling company Ipsos Mori last year. The survey is used by councils nationwide to plan investment in services from what residents have said is important or needs improving.

In Hackney, the survey showed that 72 per cent of residents are satisfied with their local area as a place to live, up from 60 per cent two years ago. Since then, the Council has invested more than £1.6 million in street cleaning and graffiti removal, £4.8m with partners in improvements to parks, and over £5 million in youth activities.

Mayor Jules Pipe said: “Surveys like this are important because they help us deliver the services residents tell us they want and need.”

Library goes self-service

BORROWING from Homerton Library has never been easier following the introduction of self-service technology.

The library is the first in Hackney to install the new system that allows users to scan items in and out like an Oyster Card and pay for them via the system and receive a print out of borrowed items and when they are due for return. The system will help cut waiting times for people wanting to borrow and return books, and free up library staff to provide more help to customers.

CLR James Library in Dalston will be the next library with RFID in July, followed by Hackney Central Library in September. All of the borough's libraries will have the system by 2010.

College chosen to host event recognising national importance of vocational qualifications

Students were able to show off their skills in bricklaying, catering, cabinet making and rounded the day off with a fashion show

“Now other people can see how excellent HCC is”

Celebrity chef James Martin watches as student Naomi Richards works while he is hosting a vocational qualifications event at Hackney Community College; Principal Ian Ashman (below) says it was because of positive progress that it was chosen as the venue for the day

Recipe for success

By
Nick Rutherford

CELEBRITY chef James Martin was on hand to offer advice when he hosted a national celebration of vocational qualifications at Hackney Community College.

The star of BBC's Saturday Kitchen inspired the hundreds gathered at the VQ Day 2009 event at the Shoreditch campus, by explaining that his own vocational studies were the springboard to his success.

Guests were treated to gourmet canapes prepared and served by the college's hospitality and catering students in training restaurant, Open Kitchen.

The event on 24 June ended with a spectacular catwalk show put on by fashion students. This also marked the start of the college's community open day, which featured the end of year arts shows and performances, circus acts and international dance and music.

Gloria Robinson, a hospitality student from Homerton, said: "It's great that our college is holding this event. The college and tutors have been so important to me, in getting qualified for my career."

Now other people can see how excellent Hackney Community College is."

The open day also included two celebrations of student achievement, as 70 students picked up awards at the Jack Petchey awards ceremony, and Basketball Academy members collected their season's medals and coach-nominated awards.

Principal Ian Ashman said: "It's a mark of the increasingly positive image of the college and its recent progress that we were selected to host VQ Day, an important national event. It was great that we could combine it with an impressive community open day, and awards that recognise the achievements of so many students."

Go east for arts

By
Emma Britton

CREATE09 has arrived, bringing together a huge selection of international and homegrown talent in art, music and cultural events.

The festival, led by Hackney, is a celebration of the unique character of the five Olympic and Paralympic host boroughs. The aim is to develop the UK's next major international arts festival – a legacy for the Olympic and Paralympic Games that will have a lasting impact on the cultural life of London.

Highlights in Hackney this year range from established favourites like the Shoreditch Festival and Wet Sounds at London Fields Lido and Clissold Leisure Centre; to new events like 1234 Festival; a programme of events from the Barbican; and a Dance and Physical Theatre Festival at Dalston's Arcola Theatre.

Another newcomer is Young London: Into Music, an urban music festival programmed and produced by and for young people.

Meanwhile, It's Our Time, Look to the Future, Look East! at Ocean in Mare Street will showcase work from Fundamental's Legacy Now Youth Panel, a group of young people from the five host boroughs who have been involved with planning for the future of the Olympic Park after 2012. The event offers a chance to find out more, see the plans and talk about issues around the Games. There is also a range of events for younger children and families, including an artist-led walk with a difference in Hoxton.

For art fans, world-renowned duo Gilbert and George will present a series of 38 new works with an east London focus at Hoxton's White Cube Gallery, while the Hackney's Wicked Art Festival will see local artists show work in their studios for an open house event.

These pages include just a few of the highlights so far.

Lining up the laughs

By Jennifer Riley

More Bums on Seats, Hackney Empire, 20 June

IN a fantastic night of comedy, the master of dead pan, story-telling humour, Stewart Lee was joined by ex-partner Richard Herring, Brendon Burns, Simon Amstell and Josie Long who all took to the stage in support of Cardboard Citizens, a charity which provides training and support for London's homeless people.

Undaunted by such an established line-up, New Zealand comic Jarred Christmas successfully weaved his own surreal routine in to the evening and got some of the best laughs whilst playing host between acts. Although not as high profile as the likes of Lee and Amstell, Hackney local and Skins writer Josie Long proved that her unpretentious, intelligent comedy is also worthy of top billing. However, it was a topsy-turvy night, with the much anticipated Simon Amstell up first (maybe he had somewhere to go to afterwards?) but the captivating ex Popworld presenter didn't disappoint. With tales of disastrous dating and upsetting his doting Grandma, he left the audience wanting that bit more and set up what turned out to be a brilliant evening out.

The night was part of the five-borough East by South East Comedy Festival, bringing new and established comedy talent to iconic London venues.

Emmy (right) and Fatima at the Rooted in the Earth flower bed in Clissold Park

Saying it with flowers

MOST of us have heard the slogan 'say it with flowers'. That's exactly what Emmy Minton has done for her friend and colleague Fatima Roberts.

Emmy nominated Fatima as her hero in a Rooted in the Earth competition, part of the Create Art Award 2009, in which the prize was for the winner to have their name planted in a large floral artwork in Clissold Park, N16.

Emmy has worked with Fatima for about three years at Open Doors, a Hackney-based charity that helps homeless people. She said: "Fatima is a rooted in the earth, salt of the earth, fantastically fabulous, living saint of a human being."

"She spends her time supporting and lobbying for Hackney's most vulnerable women with reserves of empathy, patience and commitment that inspire and energise everyone around her."

A team of volunteers spent three days working with artist Joshua Sofaer to create the flowerbed, which was unveiled to mother-of-five and grandmother-of-two Fatima, 49, on 29 June. She said: "I was quite honoured and quite humbled to see my name there in Clissold Park, in Hackney, which is a place I know and love. All my working life has been in Hackney. "I was really surprised that I had won. It was amazing, as I have never been nominated for anything or won anything in my life – not even a raffle. I think it's wonderful that anybody who works in the borough can be nominated. It's a great opportunity to highlight what goes on in the borough and it will be great to bring people to see this."

As the first in a series of annual commissions, the Create Art Award, sponsored by the Bank of America, was established to encourage artists living and working in the five host boroughs to create artwork that engages and enriches the lives of the people living around them.

The second joint winner of the 2009 awards is Station House Opera for their project Dominoes, which will see thousands of breeze blocks set up as a row of giant dominoes stretching across the five host boroughs on 26 July.

Anyone for square dancing?

By Louise Hudson,
Dalston resident

Barbican Blaze – Cuba 50, Gillett Square, 27 June

DALSTON was fervent with summer carnival atmosphere for masters of Cuban music, Yoruba Andabo, Changui de Guatanamo and Son del Tropico. All three were magnificent in their performances and had revellers of all ages dancing the samba and the salsa in Dalston's cultural quarter. Hailing from Cuba, the bands kept the crowd enraptured and hip wiggling all day with their joyous and uplifting fusion of Spanish guitar and African rhythms. The captivating elegance of the band's dancers, the evocative vocals and the laid-back cool Cuban style also made these performances hard to forget.

A highlight was definitely Son del Tropico's enigmatic lead singer's jaunt off stage, kissing and serenading members of the excited crowd. The holiday atmosphere of the day was heightened by the aroma of Cuban and African barbeques wafting over the square from a street festival in neighbouring Bradbury Street, and the blazing sunshine, from which the performers had cover on their treelined stage. Even a spectacular storm at the end of the day didn't dampen spirits. All in all, this was a perfect summer festival for kids, parents, young professionals and older people alike.

If you missed out this time, there is another free Blaze event in Gillett Square, Dancing in the Square, on 11 July. For info visit: www.barbican.org.uk

Council Chamber

Stoke Newington Town Hall

The Council is currently restoring Stoke Newington Town Hall's Assembly Room and Council Chamber to their former glory. The work is being carried out carefully to ensure the preservation of many of the original features of the building, whilst also providing flexible space for a range of uses.

The refurbished areas will provide residents, their friends and families, a great space to celebrate their life events. It will reopen in 2010, offering space for community use, such as older people's clubs, schools' activities, and private hire for parties, clubs, meetings, cultural events, citizenship and naming ceremonies. The venue will also be fully licensed to conduct marriages and civil partnerships.

If granted, the licence will take effect from 1 January 2010. The building will re-open in February 2010. Enquiries and bookings will be taken from September 2009.

The Council recognises that Stoke Newington Town Hall is located in the middle of a residential area. We will only provide permission for those events we consider to be suitable in light of this. In addition, we will be taking many steps to prevent noise, anti social behaviour and unsuitable events.

We will:

- Conduct a risk assessment for all events and ensure that any risks identified are addressed
- Implement several measures to prevent noise and disturbance to neighbouring residents, including a noise limiter
- Put in place robust checks, which will be conducted routinely, in advance of any booking being confirmed
- Check the suitability of the content of events for their intended audiences
- Conduct appropriate checks on people supervising activities at the centre, in particular, with vulnerable people, including children
- Ensure all hirers sign a Letting Agreement, which includes conditions relating to noise and damage
- Require all hirers to leave a noise - damage deposit which will be forfeited if the Letting Agreement is breached
- Restrict consumption of alcohol to certain areas of the building
- Promote public transport and the use of public car parks on Church Street in the publicity materials for the building in order to minimise impact on existing Pay & Display and permit only parking bays.

Feeling good about Hackney blues

The biggest achievement to date for playwright Dave Hall is having his play about Robert Johnson (below) performed at the Hackney Empire

By
Nick Rutherford

HAVING his play about legendary blues musician Robert Johnson performed at the Hackney Empire is his biggest career achievement to date for playwright and Dalston resident Dave Hall.

It was originally performed as a two-hander while he was studying philosophy at Cambridge University, then taken to the Edinburgh Fringe Festival, where it garnered critical acclaim.

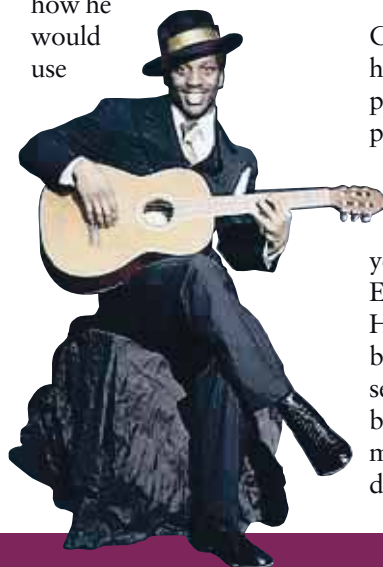

Now Belfast-born Dave – who writes under his full name David Walter Hall, to avoid confusion with an actor of the same name – has rewritten it to include 20 singers, six musicians and two actors. It is due to be performed at the Hackney Empire on 16 July.

“There is stuff happening here. It’s interesting and people are interesting”

Dave, 26, says: “It’s my interpretation of the myth that surrounds Robert Johnson, who is sometimes referred to as the king of the Delta blues. People say that he sold his soul to the devil to become the great guitarist he was. He has influenced people like Keith

Richards and Eric Clapton. At university, I saw some student plays and wondered if anyone had written about him. So I Googled his name and saw no one had. Then one night, a dark night, appropriately, a voice came into my head about how this character of the devil would sound – how he would use rhyme and tricks. I sat down and started writing, and six months later had a finished script.”

He is now working on a script called Mysterioso about jazz pianist Thelonious Monk, due to be performed at the Riverside Studios in Hammersmith in October.

Dave is excited about Cross Roads Blues – which he is also directing and producing – being performed in Hackney.

“I’ve had plays performed at King’s Head in Islington, and for several years in a row at Edinburgh. But being at the Hackney Empire is the biggest thing to date. It seems that everything I do is bigger than the last so it’s moving in the right direction.”

So how does Hackney compare to his home city?

“It’s much better here. There is stuff happening here. It’s interesting and people are interesting.

“I like the Vortex jazz club and I recently discovered Cafe OTO – it’s a very alternative music place. Italian Vogue recently said how cool Dalston is and Cafe OTO was mentioned. I love the Rio cinema – you don’t get independent cinemas like it in the West End. The food’s great – I’m a real foodie. I love all the Turkish places. The best kebabs in the world are in Hackney.”

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q. I always recycle clothes through the green box or in clothing and shoe banks across the borough. A sack was recently put through my door claiming to be from a charity. Are such collections okay to use and how are the clothes used?

A. There are several options to put your unwanted clothes for reuse and recycling through registered charities.

If you are in doubt about a leaflet or sack you received for door-to-door clothing collections you can check with the Charity Commission whether the collector is genuine. Contact the Charity Commission on 0845 300 0218 and it will be able to verify if it is a charity or not. Residents with a green box can recycle unwanted clothing and shoes through this scheme.

Clothing collected through the green box is taken to Lawrence M. Barry and Co in Canning Town. Garments are exported for reuse. Textiles that cannot be reused are converted into dusters and wadding. For info visit: www.lmb.co.uk/information

There are clothing and shoe banks, managed by either TRAIID or Oxfam, at 48 of the Council recycling sites. Garments collected are sorted and sold in the charities' shops.

Residents hunt through the free items on offer at the Council's most recent Give and Take Day

Wasting less

By Martine Large

EVENTS in Hackney to mark National Recycle Week provided a chance to celebrate the borough's growing recycling rate and learn how to cut waste even more.

Residents have made a huge increase in the amount of household waste they recycle. From just one per cent in 2002, the amount has risen to almost a quarter – 23 per cent in 2008.

The week, from 22-28 June, saw the Council's recycling team go out and about in the borough. More than 100 people visited an event in the Narrow Way, where residents were able to speak to members of the team, and learn more about services. More than 40 made pledges to reduce waste and recycle more.

The team was also at Hackney Community College's Open Day on 24 June.

“National Recycle Week was a great chance to raise awareness and encourage others”

The theme of the fifth annual week was Let's Waste Less, with tips on how to cut the amount of rubbish that goes to landfill – whether by recycling everyday items such as glass jars, bottles, newspapers and plastic, or reusing carrier bags and composting at home.

There was also a free Give and Take event at Ambler Primary School, Blackstock Road, N4, for people to pass on things they had no more need for, or reuse somebody else's unwanted items.

Cllr Alan Laing, the Council's Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods said: “Thank you to the many residents who support the Council in our commitment to help make Hackney a cleaner, greener borough. Recycle Week was a great opportunity to raise awareness and encourage others to do their bit by making recycling part of their regular routine.”

This month will also see the first Small Change, Big Difference week from 13-17 July. Organised by the Local Government Association, it aims to encourage the public to see local authorities as central to the solution of tackling climate change.

During the week the Council is encouraging people to make small changes that together can have a big impact on the planet, such as switching to low-energy light bulbs, insulating their loft, or leaving their car at home and cycling to work.

Give family a Healthy Start

By Marcel Reinard

FAMILIES on lower incomes can now use Healthy Start vouchers in Stoke Newington Farmers' Market, N16.

The market, run by local vegetable box producer Growing Communities, is the only all-organic weekly farmers' market in the UK.

It is the first farmers' market in the capital to accept the free vouchers – which can be exchanged for fresh vegetables, fruit and milk – from the Government-backed scheme. Growing Communities' Director Julie Brown said: "We know that lots of people on low incomes would like to buy organic fruit and vegetables – especially produce that has come from local farms.

"We can't change the fact that organic food costs more to produce, and we want the small family farmers we work with to get a fair price for their produce. By accepting the vouchers we hope to enable more people to buy locally produced, sustainable food – which has got to be good for them and good for the environment."

Healthy Start vouchers

Stoke Newington Farmers' Market now accepts Healthy Start vouchers are available to families on low incomes with children under four; expectant mothers who are under 18 are also eligible. They can also be used in participating greengrocers, chemists, corner shops, food co-ops and supermarkets.

Grow your own

A JOINT allotment venture between The Petchey Academy, E8, and Hackney environmental education charity ecoActive is hoping to unearth some volunteers.

The Petchey Kitchen Garden Project received £10,000 from the Big Lottery Local Food fund to carry out a project on the school's grounds.

A group of students from the Academy has been involved from the start, helping to design the allotments, building raised beds, and deciding what produce to grow.

Since Easter, they have been joined by a number of dedicated local residents, and are now looking for extra workers.

As well as volunteering, the scheme offers people the chance to grow and eat their own food.

All produce will be shared out. Help is on hand from a trained gardener, and all equipment and seeds are provided.

The garden's official opening takes place on 14 July at 2pm.

PUPILS put on their dancing shoes for a festival at Bridge Academy.

Hackney Celebrates Dance was organised by Hackney School Sports Partnership (HSSP). The event saw students from six primary and four secondary schools showcase routines created with help from teachers and dance instructors.

Samba, waltz, flamenco and hip-hop were all given a whirl, and the festival included a surprise performance from Hackney Free and Parochial School's steel drum band Youth United, as well as a body-popping routine from Chris Stein of Dynamic Groove.

Arianna Evans, a pupil at Haggerston School for Girls, said: "It was amazing to perform our dance on such a great stage. We worked so hard, and to be able to do it again for the primary schools was fantastic. We loved watching the primary schools perform – they were so sweet"

Taking part in the festival along with Haggerston were students from Clapton Girls' Technology College, Jubilee Primary, Holmleigh Primary, Gayhurst Community School, William Patten Primary, Princess May Primary, Rushmore Primary and The Bridge Academy.

Cornering the global market

A GROUP of Hackney students have been showing off their flair and initiative at the London Stock Exchange.

Skinners' Company's School for Girls is the first to be involved in a new project that highlights the importance of thinking and acting globally when setting up a business. Skinners' pupils set up a stall selling goods exported by a school in Berlin, starting with German snack products. They plan to corner the market on items that UK customers are unfamiliar with.

Pupils from Skinners' Company's School for Girls at their stall

A partnership between Skinners' and the Berlin school was set up by Achievers' International, an online enterprise project where groups of students form a company and import and export goods with a partner school overseas.

The aim of the project is to help young people learn about global trading and form bonds with their peers overseas.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Children brave the Dragon's Den

STUDENTS from Berger Primary School faced the fire of criticism in a Dragons' Den-style competition, presided by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of London.

As part of his campaign to promote financial literacy in schools, Lord Mayor Ian Luder visited the event, in which year six students presented product ideas, marketing plans and budget forecasts.

The Lord Mayor told the pupils he has a particular interest in Hackney as his father used to teach "just down the road". The event was arranged by Inspire!; the education business partnership for Hackney.

Cultivating sporting excellence

ENGLAND Basketball has rewarded Hackney Community College's (HCC) seven years of success with a licence to offer a certified programme to talented players.

The Advanced Apprenticeship in Sporting Excellence (AASE) status allows the Shoreditch-based academy to cultivate the sporting careers of promising 16-18-year-old basketball players, who are also working towards other qualifications, such as A-levels. Students will also achieve coaching badges and experience to help them in the sport. Academy Director Chris Morris was delighted with gaining AASE status, making the academy one of only 12 colleges and schools in England that can deliver the programme, and the only one in inner London. Players aged 16-18 who aspire to play at the highest level and wish to continue their education should call Chris on: 020 7613 9170 or: 07786 485 223; or e-mail: academies@hackney.ac.uk

Win tickets to Shoreditch music party

THE 1234 SHOREDITCH is a one-day music festival at which new and local musicians get the chance to perform along with more established acts. The Rakes – who started in the area and were signed after being spotted at a showcase gig in Shoreditch four years ago – will be playing the main stage, as will flamboyant singer Patrick Wolf (pictured), who also cut his musical teeth locally. But that is not all – there will also be performances from dozens of up- and-coming bands and singers including Advert, A Place to Bury Strangers, Banjo or Freakout, Chrome Hoof, Factory Floor, Flashguns, Hatcham Social, Ipso Facto, Kasms, King Charles, Lion Club, Not Cool and O Children.

There will be great food and drink on offer from four bars and restaurants in the area – Hoxton Square Bar & Grill, The Electricity Showrooms, The Diner and Bistroteque. And when the main event is over, festivalgoers will have their pick from ten after-parties at local venues. The fun is due to take place in Shoreditch Park on 26 July, from 12noon to 9pm. Tickets cost £15 – including admission to after-parties – and people living in neighbouring estates and streets can get theirs for half price.

Hackney Today has got two pair of tickets to give away. Send a postcard to The 1234 Shoreditch Competition, Hackney Today, Communications, 2 Hillman St, E8

1FB; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12 noon on 17 July. Winners will be picked out of a hat.

REVIEW

Hoppy's pictures captured a time long since past

By Beccy Smart

Hoppy, Against Tyranny, until 19 July, Idea Generation Gallery, Chance street, E2

AFTER years of keeping them tucked away in dusty boxes, Hoppy has opened up his vast archive of arresting black and white photos from an era long since past. From both the content and style, you realise how Hoppy as photographer maximised his influence by being both a part of the scene and a recorder of it. It seems all the people he photographed, iconic (or being made iconic), were his friends. There are pictures of nuclear disarmament protests, the first rockers, black jazz musicians, mad poets, nude females, nude drunk males, the Beatles, the Rolling Stones and many counter-culture moments. So stylistically of the 1960s, the shots are almost a cliché of this time. Yet with the exposure of these pictures – a mix of posed and unposed subjects – you see into the world of 1960's London, and what it meant to be young at that time.

Development was fast, youth was taking control of culture, and London was shaping up for the challenges of redefining itself as a modern metropolis. You get the feeling of being 'there', and that Hoppy really was.

View from St Augustine's Tower first thing on the Summer Solstice

By Mike Trier

THE clouds parted over Hackney just in time for any early risers to enjoy the spectacular sunrise during this year's Summer Solstice.

St Augustine's Tower held a special crack of dawn event to watch the sun emerge, one of the most striking areas in the borough to mark the longest day in the Northern Hemisphere.

The Grade I listed building opened at 4am on 21 June; but while early cloud cover threatened to dampen spirits, the sun poked through an hour later. One attendee said: "It certainly was worth getting up at 4am for — although I have to admit that I didn't get there until 5am. The walk across Hackney in the peace of the early morning; the opportunity of looking at Hackney's skyline from a high vantage point in the beautiful sunlight; meeting people coming home from a night out; and just doing something a bit different from the norm was a great experience."

St. Augustine's Tower is open to the public on the last Sunday of each month. Further details at www.hhbt.org.uk based upon the history of fairground, music hall, circus and seaside amusements. The exhibition presents art and performance influenced by exploitation in the field of popular entertainment in the 19th and 20th century. 30 Queensdown Rd, E5. Info: 07531 342 128; www.gallery@gmail.com; www.wilsonwilliamsgallery.com

HACKNEY FESTIVALS GUIDE SUMMER 2009

www.createlondon.org

A Host for 2012

This summer there's a fantastic selection of visual arts, festivals, dance, music and cultural events happening across the borough, to suit all tastes and age groups. The programme of events will showcase local talent and celebrate Hackney as a vibrant, creative and diverse borough.

CREATE is the cultural partnership of the five Olympic and Paralympic host boroughs. Hackney is the lead borough on culture and there's loads happening here as part of the CREATE09 festival. Details of what's happening in Hackney as part of CREATE09, as well as in Hackney's fringe festival are in this guide, designed to be pulled out and kept all summer!

CREATE09

JOSHUA SOFAER: ROOTED IN THE EARTH

21 June – 2 August

Rooted in the Earth is a unique project that discovers and celebrates unsung heroes. Over the past months, people from across the 5 Olympic host boroughs of Hackney, Waltham Forest, Tower Hamlets, Newham and Greenwich, have been asked to nominate a local hero, someone that they think is worthy of an accolade. After receiving thousands of submissions, the winning names have been chosen and will be planted as large-scale, ornamental flowerbeds, one in each of the five boroughs. Hackney's Hero will have their name lit up in flowers in Clissold Park – the winner will be announced soon! The flowerbed will be completed by the artist, Joshua Sofaer, together with a team of volunteers from local gardening clubs, and will be on view until the autumn when the plants will be resituated or composted. Part of the Bank of America CREATE Art Award.

A TRACE OF MY EXISTENCE

28 May – 31 August

"The subjects of A Trace of My Existence are full of charm, humour, pathos and a kind of triumphant dignity".

Ken Russell, The Times, 2 June 2009

A Trace of My Existence is the first European show by the Colombian collective Click por los Barrios (Click for the Neighbourhoods). These arresting images were taken by children and young people who live in the poorest areas of Colombia's second largest city, Medellin.

Click por los Barrios was set up 5 years ago by a group of professional documentary and press photographers weary of feeding the media appetite for images of violence. Each photographer works in a particular area of the city, working with young people aged between 5 and 26. The images taken by the students are unique, and come out of situations of hardships and poverty but show huge optimism and energy. Of course, many of their concerns are those of young people everywhere - friends, family, their neighbourhood and its characters - just messing around.

Coming to the end of the earth

By Sally England
Local Studies Librarian

TODAY Hackney Free and Parochial School stands in the place of a great tropical rainforest hothouse.

But gardeners everywhere owe a lasting debt to the Loddiges family and their extraordinary nursery, which once brought the far ends of the earth to a small corner of Mare Street.

George Loddiges (1786-1846) took over the business from his father Conrad, and under him the nursery flourished to become a famous attraction.

People came to see fascinating imported plants, such as azaleas, camellias, and wisteria.

Although familiar to gardeners today, they were then new and exotic. One such visitor was Charles Darwin, who noted in September 1838 that he: "Saw in Loddiges' garden 1,279 varieties of roses!!! Proof of capability of variation."

One of the nursery's great sights was the largest hothouse then built – 80ft long, 60ft high and 40ft wide, with a 30ft viewing platform. It housed a forest of ferns, palms, and orchids, watered by periodic rainstorms from perforated pipes running the length of the roof, an invention for which Loddiges won a medal from the Horticultural Society in 1817.

Between 1818 and 1851 the nursery went on to win a further 11 horticultural medals.

George Loddiges worked with his brother-in-law, illustrator George Cooke, on The Botanical Cabinet, a lavishly illustrated series of 20 volumes published between 1818 and 1833. They contained 2,000 images of rare plants, alongside accounts of how the specimens had been collected.

George was also involved in the design and landscaping of Abney Park Cemetery, including an arboretum of 2,500 trees, and a rosarium to complement the chapel's rose windows.

When George died suddenly in 1846, his son Conrad II (1821-1865) took over. But by now land was valuable for housing, and Conrad found it difficult to negotiate a new lease. Fashions in gardening were also changing. Conrad included a plaintive apology when sending out the catalogue for 1850. It reads: "We are sorry to say that the taste for botanical plants has much degenerated of late years, and the catalogue would not even pay for the printing." It didn't help that increased pollution was forcing nurseries and market gardens to move or close.

Loddiges Nursery was wound down during the 1850s. The whole stock of exotic plants was offered to Kew Gardens for just £9,000 – 20 years earlier it had been valued at £200,000 – but the offer was not taken up. Instead, the stock was gradually auctioned off during the summer of 1852, with Sir

Joseph Paxton acquiring the remainder for the Crystal Palace, including one of the huge palm trees. As tall as a three-storey house and weighing 15 tons, the tree was pulled to its new home through the streets of London by a team of 32 horses.

Clockwise from above: George Loddiges; title page from volume III of The Botanical Cabinet, 1826; article from the London Illustrated News about the palm tree being moved from Hackney to Sydenham; excited visitor Charles Darwin; a plan of the heating system for the hot houses; and various flower illustrations from The Botanical Cabinet

There are memorials to the Loddiges family in the gardens of St John-at-Hackney and in Abney Park Cemetery, and the name lives on in Loddiges

Street and Loddiges House on the Frampton Park Estate, but of the nursery itself nothing remains. Instead, houses stand where flowers once bloomed.

Vote for a musical marvel

Headway East London's talent pool includes the Melody Singers (above) and music therapist Alex Street (below, on guitar)

All stories by
Nick Rutherford

RESIDENTS have until 10 July to vote for Headway East London, which has been shortlisted in the annual search for the UK's favourite National Lottery funded project.

The brain injury charity, based in Kingsland Road, E2, was awarded £10,000 by the National Lottery last year for its music therapy project Music Makes the World Go Round.

The money was used to employ part-time, trained music therapist Alex Street, and to buy instruments.

Music Makes the World Go Round is entered in the best arts category.

Chosen from more than 500 projects, Headway East London has now reached the semi-final stages.

Chief Executive Miriam Lantsbury said: "The awards are a great opportunity to spread the word about what we do — we're really hoping people get behind us and vote."

If it is chosen, people taking part in the music therapy project will appear on a BBC1 show on a date to be fixed. The charity joins St John at Hackney Churchyard Gardens, which has also been shortlisted in the best heritage project category.

Influencing health care

ELECTIONS are due to take place for the first time to find 13 people to join an independent steering group that influences how healthcare is delivered in the borough.

Hackney Local Involvement Network (LINK) is totally independent of the Council and NHS.

Anyone who lives in the borough or uses health or adult social care services is eligible to become a member of LINK. The election will take place by postal vote, and the count is on 21 July.

Chairperson Shirley Murgraff said: "Our elections are an opportunity, both exciting and challenging, for Hackney citizens to help make the buzz words 'patient and public involvement' a reality. On the ground, at decision-making levels, and where it matters for improving adult health and social care services in Hackney."

A new programme is helping HCC students get into nursing

A new route into nursing

STUDENTS who want to pursue a career in nursing will now have a helping hand thanks to a new partnership between Hackney Community College (HCC) and City University London.

HCC, along with four other London colleges, has signed a unique agreement that allows students to move more easily from access diploma courses and Certificates of Higher Education to studying adult nursing at City University London's School of Community and Health Sciences.

Representatives from HCC, Tower Hamlets, Lambeth, City and Islington, Kensington & Chelsea, and Birkbeck attended an event in June at City University London to sign the agreement.

The aim is to increase the number of students in Higher Education from under-represented groups, to ensure the NHS workforce reflects the diversity of people who use the service. The agreement was brought about with help from Linking London, a network that promotes life-long learning.

LEADER OF (RAT) PACK

John Leader is the Council's Hygiene Services Manager

PEST control is just one of the operations that John is responsible for. He is also in charge of the animal warden service, bereavement service, disposal of clinical waste, public morgue and Hackney's public lavatories. John started working for the Council around 30 years ago as a student environmental health officer, and has been in charge of pest control for the past 15. Because of his wealth of experience he has been invited to sit on the National Pest Advisory Panel. Now 62, he says: "I seem to end up running pretty worthwhile services – doing things that actually make a difference. "I like working in Hackney in general because I'm always busy. "What I like about pest control is that you can see improvements coming from what you are doing. When my staff arrive, people are glad to see them."

Under control

By Nick Rutherford

OUR main aim is to protect public health, says John Leader. He is in charge of the Council's pest control unit, managing a team of 12 staff, whose work involves reducing the number of rats and mice and insects, such as cockroaches, in the borough. Pests are never going to completely disappear, he explains, adding: "The word we use is control, rather than eradication." Discarded takeaway litter, untidy gardens, and poorly managed building sites provide breeding grounds for rats and mice, but even the best kept homes can become infested without adequate proofing. Milder winters also mean rodents don't die off naturally in the cold weather as they did in the past. John's team deals with about 1,000 treatment requests a month. About three-quarters of the work carried out is for Hackney Homes, dealing with problems reported by tenants. Blocks of flats present an opportunity for rodents and insects to spread from one home to another, so it is important to treat infestations in this type of housing quickly and thoroughly. Pests need three things to thrive:

Pests like mice and rats can spread quickly in blocks of flats water, food and shelter. However, because of the team's work, pests are kept to a minimum in Hackney. John adds: "The real advice I would give is that as soon as you realise you've got a problem, get a professional in to sort it out immediately."

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Jack Stone, 20, has just started the apprenticeship programme at Hoxton Apprentice. Born and raised in East Ham, Jack left school at 16 to enrol on an apprenticeship scheme fixing security alarms, but after two and half years he lost interest. He left knowing he wanted a change of career, but was unsure what area to pursue. He then spent nearly two years veering between dead-end jobs and unemployment; his enthusiasm for work slowly began to collapse. Jack came across an advert to take part in a hospitality-based 'Faking It' challenge. The two-week crash course would take a group of young unemployed 'fakers' and provide them with basic culinary training, culminating with them preparing for a VIP lunch. Within the two weeks Jack was hooked and saw cookery as a future career rather than just another 'job'. He said: "The 'Faking It' project and Hoxton Apprentice have opened my eyes to new opportunities: I now know what I want to do in life."

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

Hackney

Ten-year-old Felix from Jubilee Primary is one of the Junior Road Safety Officers who went to the London Transport Museum

By
Gabriel Harriss

HACKNEY pupils who promote road safety in the borough were treated to a day out at the London Transport Museum as a reward for their hard work.

Year Five and Six Junior Road Safety Officers (JRSOs) from Jubilee Primary School in Stoke Newington and Tyssen Community School in

Our JRSOs are doing a fantastic job and this is just reward

Stamford Hill were among pupils from across London invited to the fun-packed 'Street Safe Live' event.

The day included workshops in which children got to build a balloon-powered bus and a performance of an audience participation quiz in which road safety was the theme.

JRSOs promote road safety issues in their classrooms, and their efforts have helped to reduce the number of children killed or seriously injured on London's roads. In total 17 Hackney primaries are involved in the scheme.

Cllr Alan Laing, the Council's Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Our JRSOs are doing a fantastic job and this is just reward for the hard work they put into teaching their classmates to stay safe on the borough's roads."

Felix, 10, a JRSO at Jubilee Primary, said: "I'm one of two Junior Road Safety Officers at my school.

"One of the most important things I teach is how to cross the road safely by being careful."

Mini inspectors

PUPILS from Berger Primary School in Homerton were treated to a close up of the borough's four new East London Line stations at Hackney Museum.

Classmates Max, Brianna, and Mustafa all six, and Gokdeniz, five, saw the 1:100 scale models of Dalston Junction, Hoxton, Haggerston and Shoreditch High Street on the first day of the Past Present and Future exhibition, which was at the museum last month before going on tour around London.

The line will provide Hackney's first proper link to the Tube by 2010, and a link to Highbury & Islington is due in 2011.

The exhibition also has a display of artefacts found during building, including Stone Age daggers, and the largest collection of marbles yet found in London.

NEWS IN BRIEF

A chance to get on your bike

RESIDENTS of all ages have been picking up cycling tips at Evelyn Court in Amhurst Road, E8. The free STA Bikes project on Saturday mornings offers the chance to learn to ride, brush up skills, or improve confidence cycling on the road, with help from professional instructors. The Bike Doctor is also on hand to give cycles a health check. STA Bikes' Director Sally Haywill said: "The sheer joy on people's faces when they master a skill gives a clue to the increase in confidence and all-round feeling of wellbeing achieved through the cycling."

STA Bikes is a not-for-profit organisation based at Sir Thomas Abney Primary School, N16. It aims to improve the lives of children and families through cycling and related activities. For info, visit: www.stabikes.org.uk There are still places available for Evelyn Court sessions on 11, 18 and 25 July. To book, call Maggie Cook on: 077 406 47486; or e-mail: ecat.hackney@hotmail.co.uk

Police promote safer cycling

HACKNEY police urged cyclists and motorists to take care on the borough's roads during a safer cycling day last month. Police officers were outside

Shoreditch Fire Station to give out road safety leaflets and offer cyclists the chance to experience a driver's eye view from the cab of a lorry. At Stamford Hill, Lea Bridge Roundabout, the Narrowway and Homerton Row, police gave advice and were on the look out for people driving or riding recklessly. For info about cycle training in the borough, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/es-cycling-proficiency-547.htm

Plan a greener journey to work

STAFF at Dalston's Arcola theatre have been making the most of new bike storage facilities, the result of its workplace travel plan. The theatre developed its plan with help from Transport for London (TfL), which helps towards sustainable travel options for businesses. Funding was provided by TfL, with a dedicated team drawing up the plan with Arcola staff. The aim of the travel plan is to give staff more options to get to work including advice on car sharing, public transport, cycling, walking and reducing the need to travel through home and flexible working. For more info about the scheme, call: 020 7126 3229; visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/workplacetravelplans; or e-mail: worktpt@tfl.gov.uk

Hackney is now recognised as the most improved Council in the UK, serving one of the most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming...

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
